

SOC 213 Sociology of Literature (2 Units)

Literature as a reflection of society; and; the writer as a critical chronicler of social ills. The sociological study of the novel, poetry, play, drama, etc. to gain the writer's insights concerning the society. The social foundations and visions of modern African literature. The sociology of publishing as they relate to literature. Problems of African writers relating to audience; legacy of cultural imperialism and publishing houses.